The Premier, Mr. Dunstan, today took emergency action to conserve petroleum supplies for essential services within South Australia.

This followed today's developments in the national oil industry dispute.

Mr. Dunstan said South Australian stocks were fast being depleted and urgent action was necessary to maintain essential services.

Following a review of the present position with regard to existing stocks and the requirements of essential services, Mr. Dunstan :-

- . Convened a meeting of Executive Council. The Council approved a proclamation prohibiting all sales of petroleum supplies within the State except by an official permit. All petroleum and related product outlets are affected by the proclamation.
- . Summoned a special meeting of State Parliament for next Monday to consider emergency legislation to provide further controls on petroleum supplies.
- . Ordered all government vehicles off the road except for emergencies.
- . Urged all people in South Australia to take the utmost endeavours to conserve petrol.
- . Urged workers at the Port Stanvac refinery to return to work in accordance with A.C.T.U. recommendations.

"South Australia," he said, "is in a much worse position for petrol supplies than any other State. If petrol is not refined, and soon, we will be unable to maintain essential services. It is not a matter of convenience. It could be a matter of life and death. I cannot believe that workers would countenance the potentially dire results to people which could occur unless petrol can be obtained."
